

Growing up with a flat topography and a landscape dominated by vibrant and saturated color focused my eye on the shape of things. The juxtaposition of shapes, forms, color and line has continued to provide a vocabulary I find compelling in order to interpret and map the structures underlying the natural world, the experiential, and the abstract.